IN THE HOG LOT.

I always give the hogs plenty of coal, salt and ashes. This is what the pigs need to make bone and muscle.

Good feeding is giving the hogs just what they will eat up clean and by no means allow feed to be left in the trough.

Even if you are giving your hogs and pigs plenty of slop, you should give them access to fresh water, as it is a healthy giver.

Keep your pigs growing, and the older the pigs the more the feed. But it should be increased gradually as the pigs grow. Do not fail to keep the salt and ashes by the hogs all the time.

This is the time of year to look after your pig bed. Use plenty of common salt on the ground before you put in fresh bedding. You should also be careful to clean out beds good before you use the salt.

For scratches, burns, cuts, insect bites and the many little hurts common to every family, DeWitt's Carbolic Witch Hazel Salve is the best remedy. It is soothing, cooling, clean and healing. Be sure you get DeWitt's. Sold by Chas. C. Davis, druggist.

We wish a law could be passed prohibiting the barbaric custom of opening caskets in public at church funerals. It is a relic of dark ages and has no place in a civilized community. It jars on the sensibility of every tender cord, and is something that the churches and undertakers ought to combine and put to an end. In nine-tenths of the cases it's merely a pandering to a ghoulish curiosity. People who never spoke to the deceased in their life parade around the church, gaze at the form of our loved one, then go out of the presence of death, not to talk of the good deeds done in life, but to criticize the appearance of the poor clay that death has left for once at their mercy. Death is a sacred thing. If we are going on a long journey we do not make our adieus before a gaping crowd; we ought not to be expected to bid our dead a last good-bye while curious eyes fatten on our grief, and we ought not to be expected to sit in the house of mourning while people we never speak to, who have no claim on us or our loved one, jostle each other in their desire to view the remains, and they get together and gossip over what they saw or failed to see. We believe that a majority of the people detest the painful funeral scene as much as we do and are more than glad to see them ended out are afraid to break a "cinstom." But it is a duty the minister and undertaker owe to themselves and the long suffering public to put a stop to the exhibition, and they will find the public only too glad to uphold them with a hearty amen.

While the nomination of Augustus E. Wilson was unanimous and without delay by the Republican Convention which met in Louisville Wednesday, yet the Courier-Journal adds "it by no means follows that all was sweet harmony which the Republican leaders of the State endeavored to proclaim before and during the convention. In the nomination of the minor offices the convention resented the efforts of the machine to force the slate upon it. This was shown in several instances, notably that for Attorney-General, when Judge James W. Breathitt took the nomination, winning from John F. Lockett, who had been picked by the office-holding cabal." Not only this but there was trouble in the committee room and all along down the line with the minor offices. But however peaceful it may have been, it signifies but little in the wind up. This is Democratic year in Kentucky and S. W. Hager and those associated with him on the State ticket will go in by the usual old time Democratic majorities.

One of our exchanges tells of an old German who had a boy of whom he was very proud, and decided to find out the trends of his mind. He adopted a novel method by which to test him. He slipped into the boy's room one morning and placed on his table a bottle of whiskey, a Bible and a silver dollar. "Now," said he, "when dot boy comes in if he takes dot dollar he's going to be a beeznis man; if he takes dot Bible he's going to be a preacher; if he takes dot whiskey he's no good, and going to be a drunkard." Then he hid behind a door to see which his son would choose. In came the boy whistling. He ran up to the table picked up the Bible and put it under his arm then snatched up the bottle, took two or three drinks, picked up the dollar and put it in his pocket, and went out smacking his lips. The Dutchman poked his head out from behind the door and exclaimed: "Mein Got, he is going to be a politician."

REMARKABLE WILL.

Justice Walter Lloyd Smith, who presides over the third department of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, brought with him to the dinner of the New York University Law School Alumni Association Saturday night what he said was the most remarkable document that ever came into his possession. Others who read the document, the last will and testament of Charles Lounsbury, who died in the Cook County Asylum at Dunning, Ill., were disposed to agree with him. Here it is:

I Charles Lounsbury, being of sound mind and disposing memory do hereby make and publish this, my last will and testament, in order as justly as may be to distribute my interest in the world among succeeding men.

"That part of my interest which is known in law and recognized in the sheep-bound volumes as my property, being inconsiderable and of no account, I make no disposal of this in my will.

"My right to live being but a life estate, is not at my disposal, but, these things except all else in the world I now proceed to devise and bequeath:

"Item: I give to good fathers and mothers, in trust for their children all good little words of praise and encouragement, and all quaint pet names and endearments and I charge said parents to use them justly and generously, as the needs of their children may require.

"Item: I leave to children inclusively, but only for the term of their childhood, all and every, flowers of the fields and the blossoms of woods with the right to play among them freely according to the customs of children, warning them at the same time against thistles and thorns. And I devise to children the banks of the brooks and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, and the odors of the willows dip therein, and the white clouds that float over the giant trees. And I leave the children the long, long days to be merry in, in a thousand ways, and the night and the moon and the train of the Milky Way to wonder at, but subjects nevertheless, to the rights thereafter given to lovers.

"Item: I devise to boys jointly all the useful idle fields and commons where ball may be played; all pleasant waters where one may swim, all snow-clad hills where one may coast; and all streams and ponds where one may fish, or where, when grim winter comes one may skate; to have and hold for the period of boyhood. And all meadows with with the clover blossoms and butterflies thereof, the woods and their appurtenances the squirrels and birds, the echoes of the strange noises, and all distant places which may be visited, together with the adventures there found. And I give to said boys each his own place at the fireside at night, with all pictures that may be seen in the burning woods, to enjoy let or hindrance and without any encumbrance of care.

"Item: To lovers, I devise their imaginary world, with whatever they may need, as the stars of the sky, the red roses by the wall, the bloom of the hawthorn, the sweet strains of the music and aught else by which they may desire to figure to each other the lastness and beauty of their love.

"Item: To young men jointly I devise and bequeath all boisterous, inspiring sports of rivalry, and I give to them the disdain of weakness and undaunted confidence in their own strength, though they are rude; I give them the power to make lasting friendship, and of possessing companions, and to them exclusively I give all merry songs and brave choruses, to sing with lusty voices.

"Item: And to those who are no longer children or youths or lovers I leave memory and I bequeath to them the volumes of the poems of Burns Shakespeare and other poets, if there be others, to the end if that they may live over the old days again, freely and fully without tithe or diminution.

"Item: To our loved ones with snowy crowns, I bequeath the happiness of old age, the love and gratitude of their children until they fall asleep."—New York times.

What to do in Dyspepsia

Dieting has become a great fad in America, and just as, years ago, we, as a nation, over-ate, so now we are under-eating. The one is as bad as the other. Man needs food and plenty of it to sustain life and to give strength to compete in this busy world.

It is not, however, the fact that you may eat too much that hurts you, but that you don't digest what you eat. And if that results in dyspepsia you will not cure the trouble by cutting down your food supply. If your digestive organs were creating the proper amount of gastric and pepsin juices you would have no dyspepsia. To cure the disease you must create an abundance of these necessary juices.

This can only be done by a reliable tonic laxative, and as its name indicates, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains the very ingredients needed to do this. Take it regularly for awhile according to the explicit directions on each bottle and you will soon be cured of dyspepsia and any of the accompanying symptoms such as heartburn, sour stomach, bloated stomach, hiccups, indigestion, nervousness, wind on the stomach, etc. Every bottle carries with it an absolute guarantee to do what we claim. It is a gentle, pleasant, effective laxative and you will like its taste and be pleased with its action.

One of the great friends of this remedy is Harry P. Keener, a Lieutenant in one of the United States Cavalry regiments, and a member of the regular staff of the United States Army. While in the war, he contracted severe dyspepsia, and lost weight rapidly. A friend in the regiment sent him a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which he promptly began to use. It not only cured his dyspepsia but increased his weight 25 pounds.

Your druggist will sell you a bottle at 50 cents or if you will send a check to a hundred cents that to you.

FREE TEST These wishing to try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin before buying can have a free sample bottle sent to their homes by addressing the company. This offer is to prove that the remedy will do as we claim, and is only good to those who have never taken it. Send for it if you have any symptoms of stomach, liver or bowel disease. Send for it if you are nervous, or if you are old or infirm. A guaranteed, permanent home cure. THE PEOPLE VERDICT. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Sold and Sent as DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN. This product bears every guarantee No. 17, Washington, D. C. PEPSIN SYRUP CO.
